Overview of Telemedicine Service

Telemedicine involves the use of electronic communications to enable health care providers at sites remote from patients to provide consultative services. Providers may include urgent care practitioners, primary care practitioners, specialists, and/or subspecialists. The information may be used for diagnosis, therapy, follow-up and/or education, and may include live two-way audio and video and other materials (e.g. medical records, data from medical devices).

The communications systems used will incorporate network and software security protocols to protect the confidentiality of patient information and will include reasonable measures to safeguard the data and to ensure its integrity against intentional or unintentional corruption.

An encounter summary will be provided to the patient at the end of each encounter which may be kept for the patient's records and may be shared with other providers for treatment purposes or as otherwise permitted or required by law.

Anticipated Benefits of Telemedicine

1. Improved access to medical care by enabling a patient to remain at his or her home or office while consulting a clinician.
2. More efficient medical evaluation and management.

Possible Risks of Telemedicine

As with any medical procedure, there are potential risks associated with the use of telemedicine. Vituity believes that the likelihood of these risks materializing is very low. These risks may include, without limitation, the following:

1. Delays in medical evaluation and consultation or treatment may occur due to deficiencies or failures of the equipment.
2. Security protocols could fail, causing a breach of privacy of personal medical information.
3. Lack of access to complete medical records may result in adverse drug interactions or allergic reactions or other negative outcomes.

I understand that the laws that protect privacy and the confidentiality of medical information also apply to telemedicine. I have received the Notice of Privacy Practices (“NPP”) included at the end of this notice, which explains how Vituity may use and disclose confidential health information for treatment, payment, and healthcare operations, including for substance abuse, psychiatric care, or HIV, if applicable, as explained in the NPP.

- 2. Financial Responsibility: As applicable, I agree to the following:
 - (a)(i). Subject to applicable law and the terms and conditions of any applicable contract between Vituity and a third-party payer, and in consideration of all health care services rendered or about to be rendered to me, I agree to be financially responsible and obligated to pay Vituity for any balance not paid under the "Assignment of Benefits/Third Party Payers" paragraph below.
